Agent Provocateur Exhibitionist

Synopsis

From themes such as "weapons of mass distraction" to subliminal messages of attraction and desire, Agent Provocateur's shop windows are well known for being dramatic and daring. This very intimate shopping experience has achieved notoriety through stunning and stimulating window displays, which have become famous worldwide. Enzo Peccinotti's photography is matched with quotes from a host of famous names, including Vivienne Westwood, Debbie Harry, Mario Testino, Kate Moss, and the Editrice of Erotic Review, all responding to the delectable displays, in this stimulating look at these erotic exhibitions. Celebrating the varied window displays; from Slumber Party to Leather Maid; of a cutting-edge establishment once threatened by police with the 18th-century Obscene Displays Act, this arousing collection of images powerfully celebrates the female body and sexual attraction.

Customer Reviews

While walking down Boston's Newbury Street on my way to one of the art galleries or other unique stores that line that quaint 19th century shopping Mecca thoroughfare, my mind is often a million miles away. Then I'll suddenly come face to face with a really edgy, erotic window display for the lingerie store "Agent Provocateur." When my mind suddenly focuses on the kinky eye candy characters of whatever little mysterious story that is being told by the window art, I know I've passed the gallery I was planning to stop at. After checking out the theme of the story being told in the window display, I back track to the gallery. Earlier today it happened again. This time I decided to stick my head into the shop's door and compliment whoever is responsible for their attention grabbing window art. Today I was met by not one, but three lovely model-like sales women. I told them I'd only stopped by to compliment them on their very original window art. I just wanted whoever was responsible for designing it to know that their efforts were appreciated. One of the sales women thanked me, but said that the well-known British store chain was actually world famous for it's window designs. They had even published a book about it. That's how I came to buy a copy of this book. It's not an example of Macy's legendary G-Rated Christmas Window Displays and even Victoria's Secret, which is located down the street pales by comparison to the attractiveness and interest generated by the "Agent Provocateur" window displays. People come back to the shop time and time again just to stare mesmerized at the window displays. Single people often return with their "special" friends to share the fantasy.
