Jackson Galaxy coined the term "catification" on his hit TV show My Cat From Hell. The concept is based on the fact that at their core, even our domesticated cats are still wild animals, and while we've invited them into our homes to share our lives, we can't expect them to completely give up all their instincts. We have to look at our living space from the cat's point of view and provide an environment that keeps them stimulated. Cat style expert Kate Benjamin, the founder and publisher of Hauspanther, believes that good design can enhance the way we live with cats and improve our lives and the lives of our beloved feline companions. Kate combined her love of cats with her passion for interior design, architecture, product design, graphic design, art, and fashion, and for the last seven years, she has been showcasing her catification solutions on Hauspanther. Kate has assisted Jackson Galaxy on several episodes of "My Cat From Hell" in creating stylish, cat-friendly environments. This book is the result of the collaboration between these two champions of cats. Galaxy and Benjamin offer the definitive guide to creating a cat-friendly home environment by sharing design tips and DIY projects that can be accomplished by even those who may be afraid of using a hammer and nails. Projects range from simple wall shelves and kitty hammocks to elaborate cat trees and catios (outdoor enclosures.) The first part of the book explains why catification is crucial for happier cats, happier humans, and a deeper bond between the two species. Many behavior problems can be prevented or eliminated by providing an enriched environment. Catification is essential for single cat as well as multi-cat households.
