

The book was found

The Dark Child: The Autobiography Of An African Boy

Synopsis

The Dark Child is a distinct and graceful memoir of Camara Laye's youth in the village of Koroussa, French Guinea. Long regarded Africa's preeminent Francophone novelist, Laye (1928-80) herein marvels over his mother's supernatural powers, his father's distinction as the village goldsmith, and his own passage into manhood, which is marked by animistic beliefs and bloody rituals of primeval origin. Eventually, he must choose between this unique place and the academic success that lures him to distant cities. More than autobiography of one boy, this is the universal story of sacred traditions struggling against the encroachment of a modern world. A passionate and deeply affecting record, The Dark Child is a classic of African literature.

Book Information

Paperback: 192 pages

Publisher: Farrar, Straus and Giroux; Reissue edition (January 1, 1954)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 080901548X

ISBN-13: 978-0809015481

Product Dimensions: 6.9 x 0.5 x 8 inches

Shipping Weight: 5.6 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.3 out of 5 stars See all reviews (17 customer reviews)

Best Sellers Rank: #92,014 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #82 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Historical > Africa #240 in Books > History > Africa #279 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Ethnic & National > African-American & Black

Customer Reviews

Camara Laye was one of the first sub-saharan writers to become well-known outside of Africa. "L'Enfant Noir" or "The Dark Child" (also titled "The African Child"?) was published in 1953 when the author was twenty-five and living in France. It is a pleasantly nostalgic memoir of a childhood spent in the town of Kouroussa (French Guinea, now Guinea) and the village of Tindican, his mother's birthplace. Chapter by chapter Camara recounts his childhood memories: his father's work as a goldsmith and his position in society, his parent's magic, village life, the rice harvest, elementary Koranic education, circumcision and young men's secret society, secondary education in Conakry, girls and courtship, and his departure to continue his studies in France. After almost half a century in print, this deserves to be called a classic. [Note: some authorities state that his family name is Camara (also spelled Kamara) and his given name is Laye; the text supports this at one point. If using search engines to look for information on this author it may be useful to try both versions of his name.]

A beautifully textured, fluid and organic autobiography, Camara Laye offers readers a piece of his life in The Dark Child. As part of the Malinke community in Upper Guinea, Laye captures the layered tradition and culture of his community, deemed, perhaps by most, to be simplistic or primitive compared to today's modern standards. Yet it is exactly from Laye's descriptions of the traditions of his community that we can begin to understand the psychology of the author. Each chapter is rich with imagery, and his words smack of sincerity and innocence, bringing about an effortless quality and flow to his work--it is as if we are there with Laye experiencing his many transitions, from boyhood to manhood. His descriptions of the communal lifestyle of his people is remarkable. Laye's works like other modern African authors reveal the realities of colonization, and help readers to appreciate and celebrate indigenous African traditions.

I first got this book in junior high by a family friend but never bothered to read it until I entered high school. Not having anything to read, I took it upon myself to read the book. I found myself intrigued by the author's way of life during colonialism and his upbringing in a village and his graduation from high school. It was sad that one of his classmates died unexpectedly. Wanting to find out some more about this author I looked up a book of African authors. Unfortunately he passed away in 1980. He is a great writer and wished that I had read it soon as it was given to me.

The Dark Child also known as "The African Child" is a childhood account of a Guinean writer, Camara Laye. In the very sentimental book the author writes about his childhood in Kouroussa, a village in Guinea. He credits his father for his foresight in giving him a western education despite knowing that their ties will be altered soon. He writes lovingly about his mother for her excessive protection as he embarked into adulthood and also his doting grandmother who viewed her grandson as above faults. His father realizing the changing environment of Africa opted to send his son to school instead of spending time in the forge. His mother on the other hand is tearful when Laye departs to France for a study leave. He also writes about his friendship with Fanta on their way to school. As a grownup man living with his uncle in Conakry, he develops a relationship with a half-caste lady, Marie Lorifo. The African Child replaced The Narrow Path by Francis Selormey as my favorite African autobiography. When Laye returned back from France, he married Marie Lorifo. But his life took a drastic turn later on in the sixties when he went on exile to Senegal to escape

Sekou Toure. His parents died during his years in Dakar. His wife was unjustly imprisoned for seven years by Toure while arriving at the Guinean airport to visit her ailing dad. When she was released seven years later, she divorced Laye because he had married a second wife. Theirs is the saddest love story that I have read and I cant understand why such tragedies would have befallen one of my favorite authors. Laye died in 80. Echoing the writeup of one of the reviewers, I ask in a similar vein, "Must every book written in Africa deal with the negative influence of colonialism"? Reason why I asked this is that Laye's novel was savagely and unjustly attacked by some of his contemporaries in Africa. Another great read is So Long a Letter by Mariama Ba.

Download to continue reading...

The Dark Child: The Autobiography of an African Boy African Masks Coloring Book: A Coloring Book Featuring Over 30 Images Inspired By Traditional African Masks, Cultural History, Folk Art Coloring Book, African Art Decor African Rhythm and African Sensibility: Aesthetics and Social Action in African Musical Idioms Kaffir Boy: An Autobiography--The True Story of a Black Youth's Coming of Age in Apartheid South Africa America The Black Point of View - An Investigation and Study of the White People of America and Western Europe and The Autobiography of an American Ghetto Boy, The 1950s and 1960s Lift Every Voice: The History of African American Music (The African American History Series) African Grey Calendar - African Grey Parrot Calendar - Parrot Calendar - Calendars 2016 - 2017 Wall Calendars - Bird Calendars - Monthly Wall Calendar by Avonside Signs and Symbols: African Images in African American Quilts (2nd Edition) African American Haiku: Cultural Visions (Margaret Walker Alexander Series in African American Studies) How Africa Shaped the Christian Mind: Rediscovering the African Seedbed of Western Christianity (Early African Christianity Set) The Two Marxisms: Contradictions and Anomalies in the Development of Theory (The Dark Side of the Dialectic; V. 3) (His the Dark Side of the Dialectic; V. 3) Captive in the Dark: Dark Duet, Book 1 The Dark Tower: The Dark Tower VII Dark Web: Exploring and Data Mining the Dark Side of the Web (Integrated Series in Information Systems) In a Dark, Dark Wood Pleasure of a Dark Prince: Immortals After Dark, Book 9 The 4 Percent Universe: Dark Matter, Dark Energy, and the Race to Discover the Rest of Reality The Dark Tower VII: The Dark Tower The Wind Through the Keyhole: A Dark Tower Novel (Dark Tower Novels) His Dark Materials Trilogy (His Dark Materials)

Dmca